The Race Poem
The Race, attributed to Dr. D.H. "Dee" Groberg. Whenever I start to hang my head in front of failure's face, my downward fall is broken by the memory of a race. A children's race, young boys, young men; how I remember well, excitement sure, but also fear, it wasn't hard to tell. They all lined up so full of hope, each thought to win that race

The Race - by D. H. Groberg
a month ago Skypoe22 - Tense clever poem on speed, using racing (running) as an extended metaphor to conclude that either he started off too fast to maintain a lead and ended up last or in the particular race the boy for the first time emerged last. The last phrase of the poem "first to be last" lends itself to a double interpretation of meaning.

Race is a recent and constructed idea that caused only harm to humanity. In earlier times, one's tribal heritage linked to the region of origin was all that mattered. Color and race have been packaged and sold over the past few hundred years for economic and deceptive reasons that well thinking people of this generation should denounce and condemn.
