There are documented cases of golden eagles attacking adult deer and even a bear cub but their usual targets are hares, foxes, grouse and, on the coast, seabirds. Golden eagles nest in trees and on remote mountain crags. They can't hunt in thick forest so they have specialized to scour moors and uplands.

When the Eagle Hunts (Eagle, #3) by Simon Scarrow

Traditional eagle hunting in Mongolia only happens in winter, from late October to March, when the eagles have finished their yearly feather change, animal furs are most beautiful, and snow cover provides the best backdrop for spotting prey. If you want to see this in action, prepare to dress warm.
